Subject: Equal Employment Opportunity for Pharmacists

Motion: Move that the 2017 APhA House of Delegates amend the 2012, 1989 Equal Opportunities for Pharmacists policy as follows:

2012, 1989 Equal Rights and Opportunities for Pharmacists, Pharmacy Technicians, and Student Pharmacists

APhA reaffirms its unequivocal support of equal opportunities for professional employment and advancement, compensation, and organizational leadership positions for all pharmacists regardless of and pharmacy personnel. In addition, APhA opposes discrimination against pharmacists, pharmacy technicians, or student pharmacists based on an individual’s gender, gender identity or expression, race, color, religion, national origin, age, disability, genetic information, sexual orientation, or any other category protected by federal or state law.

Background:
Currently, no national pharmacy organization includes anti-discrimination language pertaining to sexual orientation AND gender identity or expression in policy. The following organizations have official policies which include statements directed against discrimination or bias in the healthcare workforce and/or education: American Association of Medical Colleges,1 American Medical Association,2 the American College of Physicians,3 the American Academy of Family Physicians,4 the American Physical Therapy Association,5 the American Psychological Association,6 the American Public Health Association,7 and the American Academy of Pediatrics.8

To be completed by the Office of the Secretary of the House of Delegates

Item No.: 1

It is important that the revised policy wording include the broad but unique terms: sexual orientation, gender, gender identity and gender expression. Sexual orientation includes someone’s emotional, sexual, or romantic attractions to others. While gender refers to attitudes, feelings and behaviors that a culture associates with biological sex, gender identity involves someone’s “innermost concept of self as male, female, a blend of both, or neither.” It describes how people may refer to themselves and how they perceive themselves whether different or the same as the gender they were assigned at birth. Gender expression is the “external appearance of one’s gender identity, usually expressed through behavior, clothing, haircut, or voice,” regardless whether one or more of these conforms to socially defined characteristics of male or female.

Although only 30.8% of pharmacy schools have public written statements that include both sexual orientation and gender identity, sex and gender minorities are represented in a wide variety of health professions and professional training programs. Non-inclusive learning environments in the health professions are linked to higher rates of depression and discomfort. Health professions students also cite “fear of discrimination” as one of the most common reasons to not disclose their sexual or gender minority status. In the overall lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender (LGBT) populations, two thirds have experienced discrimination in some form due to their sexual orientation or gender identity. Up to 28% of transgender people have experienced verbal harassment, a physical attack, or sexual assault at work, specifically. Other forms of mistreatment at work related to transgender status including but not limited to forced resignation or sharing of private information have been reported by 23% of transgender individuals. Members of the LGBT community in our pharmacies, clinics, colleges, hospitals, and other healthcare settings deserve respect and equal treatment. Part of that process is reaffirming a commitment to fight discrimination in our professional community.
